

Being able to fly without listening to other people's conversations is a privilege. It's bad enough I need to listen to drunks and screaming babies. My privacy is invaded in every public location (grocery stores, airports, gas stations). Please allow me one place that is "public" where I won't be subjected to having to listening to business deals and child discipline over the airwaves.